Joint call for all flights to, from, and over Belarus to be suspended and for sanctions on the Lukashenko regime from the chairs of the Parliament foreign affairs committees of Ireland, UK, US, Poland, Germany, Czechia, Latvia, Lithuania

We, the chairs of our respective national parliament's Foreign Affairs Committees, condemn unequivocally the threat of violence used against a civilian aircraft in the skies over Belarus. Using fighter aircraft to intercept a civilian Ryanair flight is an act of piracy on a route between two NATO and EU countries. This reckless act put the passengers and crew in grave danger. It is a reminder of the illegitimacy of the administration claiming authority in Minsk.

We call for an immediate inquiry to be held by the International Civil Aviation Organisation into this clear violation of free transit between states and the threats to the aircraft.

Until ICAO has reported, we call for Belarus to be suspended from the organisation and a ban on all overflight of Belarus including flights to and from the country. It is clear that the current administration in Minsk has no respect for the safety of our citizens and cannot be trusted to defend their rights. This act of state terror and kidnapping is a threat to all those who travel in Europe and beyond. It cannot be allowed to stand.

We call on NATO and European Union States to put sanctions on the Lukashenka regime and suspend their ability to use Interpol and other international organisations to further attack democracy in Europe. We call for free elections to be held under the supervision of the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe. We call for the immediate and unconditional release of Raman Pratasevich and all other political prisoners.

Tyranny has no place in Belarus or in Europe. It threatens not only its own citizens but millions of others around the world.

It's true that Russia has not been cooperative with returning the wreckage. The Kremlin fully understands that the status quo — an inward-looking PiS pursuing a conspiracy theory that fractured a briefly unified country — is useful.

Russia's choice to do nothing is the influence operation here, not its purported involvement (a theory made popular by a widely discredited former defense minister) in the crash.

"Cowardly bot" gets removed and later (correctly, IMO) restored, while plenty of horrific gendered and sexualized abuse is allowed to stand.

Will the OB address any of these cases?

Another horrible, heartbreaking story from Belarus.

Tadeusz Giczan @TadeuszGiczan

More news from Belarus. A 17 year-old Dima Stakhovsky has committed suicide just hours after police accused him of mass rioting (up to 15 years in jail). He left a note saying: "If they didn't pressure me so hard, I don't think I would've dared to do such

As with most of the things I've written lately, I really wish I didn't have to. Beautiful Belarus is in a really bad place right now. Spare a thought for her people — whose pictures on my phone I can't share so as not to get them into even more trouble.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

This is infuriating and nauseating.

Can you imagine the outcry if men had to deal with this level of abuse? The internet would look a lot different. But when women give voice to their experiences they are called weak & forced to apologize for the effects the abuse has on them.

This is unbelievably grim. There need to be real consequences.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.

1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

So glad that @wiczipedia is writing this book! The number of women who reach out to me for targeted harassment that—through no fault of their own—takes a toll on mental health, creates fear for physical safety, and could impact job opportunities down the road increases each year.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.

1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

Today, globally, there are two hundred million fewer girls and women online than men. That gap, which reflects structural discrimination on multiple levels, is expanding.

I beg to differ. Being online is a choice (men are 21% more likely to be online than women). Speaking out is a choice. Calling out harassers is a choice.

For each of those choices (which men typically don't need to consider), women open ourselves up to vitriol & violent threats.

Women may get more vitriol & violent threats but anyone who speaks against police abuses & nazi-style beliefs gets them. Being is an intransitive verb, making choices isn't.

There's no "but" there. Women—in particular those with intersectional identities—get more abuse, period. This is deliberate. The point is to keep us quiet. Women can and do choose to disengage because of online violence. In "being" online, the choice is implied. Have a nice day.

> Yes, only women open themselves up to threats when they post on SOmedia DC is top-heavy with women, & this reminds me of all the single, desperate women there.
> They pass dozens of homeless men every day, on their way to work at the office, which is making themselves the victims

DC sure is top heavy with women!

Women in the U.S. Congress 2021

2021, 142 (103D, 39R) women hold seats in the United States Congress, comprising 26.5% of the 535 members; 24 women (24%) serve in the U.S. Senate, and 118 women (27.1%) serve in the U.S. House of Representatives. Four women non-voting delegates (2D, 2R) also represent American Samoa, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands in the United States House of Representatives.

... shown in foreign and security policy establishments. Only five think tanks have at least 40 percent women scholars: the Stimson Center (52%), the Nuclear Threat Initiative (50%), the United States Institute for Peace (49%), the Institute for Policy Studies (44%), and the RAND Corporation (40%). The vast majority of the think tanks actually have less than 30% female scholars.

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Many questions about what to do if you see this sort of disruption on Election Day.

1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

I'm beyond excited to announce my next book, AT THE SPEED OF LIES, a Young Adult novel about what happens when a conspiracy theory takes over an upstate NY high school, and the teen Instagrammer who's caught in the crosshairs. Coming out with Scholastic summer 2023!

Jody Corbett at Scholastic has acquired At the Speed of Lies, a YA novel by Cindy L. Otis, former CIA analyst and author of the nonfiction book True or False. A high school Instagrammer in a wheelchair is caught up in the world of disinformation when her social media posts about an alleged local child kidnapping turn out to be linked to a QAnon-like cult. The conspiracy theory group takes over not just her social media account, but her entire school as she races to figure out how to stop the viral spread of lies. Publication is set for summer 2023; Caryn Wiseman at Andrea Brown Literary brokered the deal for world rights.

Another new (and awful) example of #MalignCreativity

Marc-André Argentino @MAArgentino

To note, the image is not one that would be hashed, rather they are appropriating the new pride flag, the chart upward emoji 📈 in this context is being used for a nazi salute.

Question to POTUS before leaving on AF1 for Europe: Do you expect that Putin will be able to work out any kind of understanding with you on the cyberattacks?

POTUS: Who knows at this point? It's going to be a subject of our discussion.

Is it too much to read into the timing of this? This can't make the State Dept folks prepping Biden very happy

Polish is a much softer sounding language than the k's and z's would suggest. A 'ł' or 'ł' is rather like an English w, while the subscript accent on an ę or ą subtly adds an n to the vowel. The Polish ch is a 'kh' sound, like in Kazakhstan.

Bartosz Bereszyński – Berresh-in-skee
Paweł Dawidowicz – Dav-id-ov-itch should be stressed so Tomáš is more like Tom-aash for English speakers. An š is a sh and č is a ch but ř is more like a 'rs'. And ě is a bit like ye in English.

Jan Bořil – Yan Borjil
Ondřej Čelůstka – Ondjay Chel-oos-tka
Adam Hložek – Hlozhek
Tomas Holeš – Holtesh
Pavel Kadeřábek – Kadder-jah-beck

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

1. Inform a poll worker- they will have resources to call
2. Call Protect the Vote or another nonpartisan election protection organization

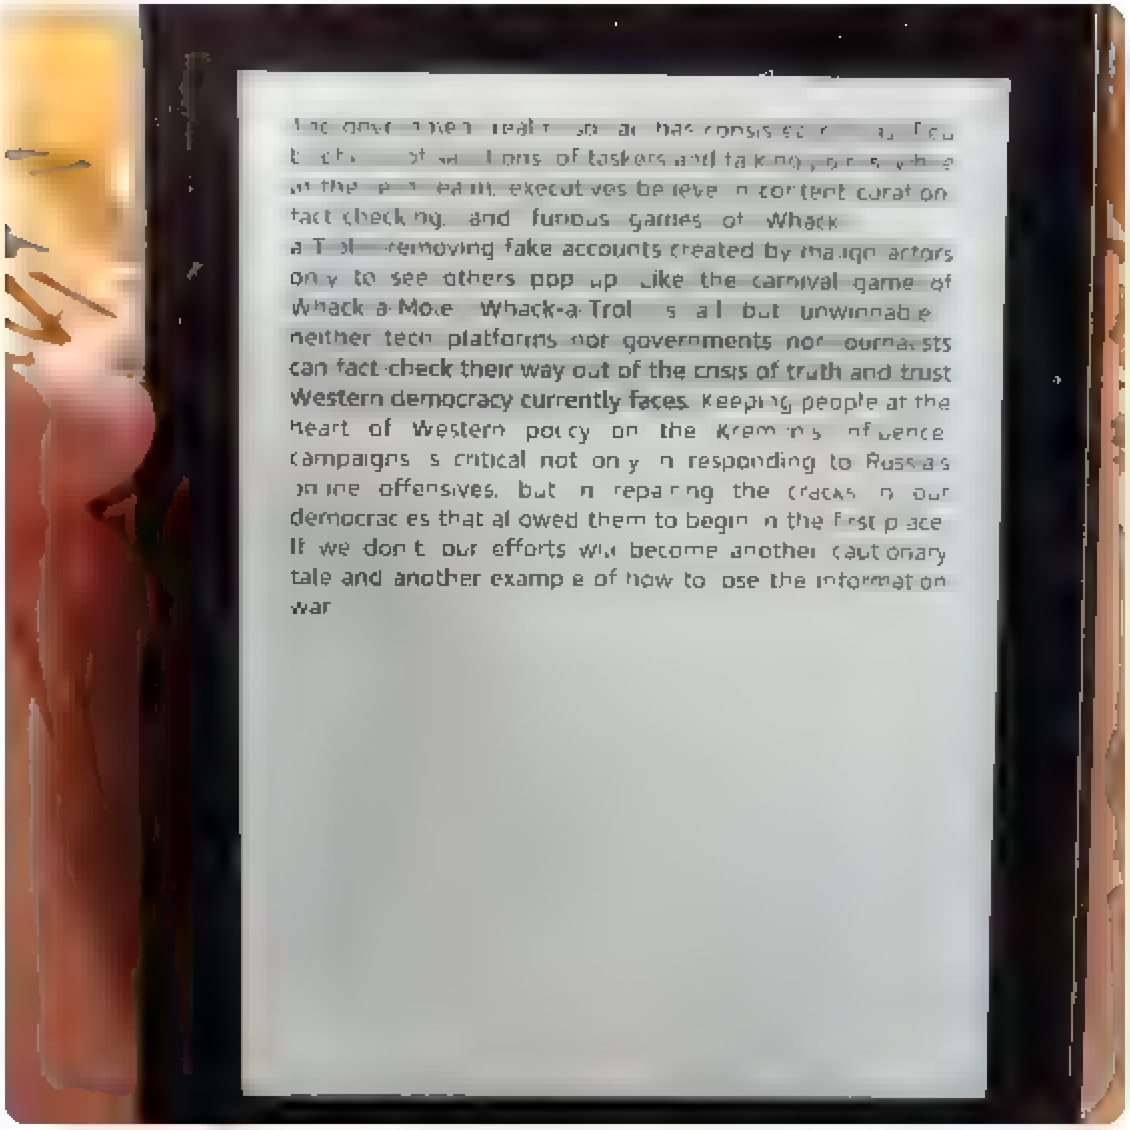
Yep, @wiczipedia nailed it. The read before you RT banner, banning a news link, the birdwatch initiative, will it work?



...removing fake accounts created by malign actors only to see others pop up, like the carnival game of Whack-a-Mole. Whack-a-Troll is all but unwinnable; neither tech platforms nor governments nor journalists can fact-check their way out of the crisis of truth and trust Western democracy currently faces. Keeping people at the heart of Western policy on the Kremlin's influence campaigns is critical not only in responding to Russia's online offensives, but in repairing the cracks in our democracies that allowed them to begin in the first place. If we don't, our efforts will become another cautionary tale and another example of how to lose the information war.

Love this Russian/British collision

Max Fras @maxfras
Every time I pass through Vauxhall I remember the story of how this humble spot in South London became the Russian word for "train station" (вокзал). "Vauxhalls" now ubiquitous from Ukraine to Kamchatka

Pres. Biden will certainly express his displeasure at continued Russian attempt to undermine US democracy.

But as I told @AKendallTaylor and the Brussels Sprouts podcast last year, we could sanction Russia to Timbuktu and back, and Putin still won't call off these efforts. (2/)

Disinformation is far from the only item on the agenda tomorrow, though. We know the leaders will discuss cybersecurity. We know Ukraine/Syria will be on the agenda. And I expect a big goal of the summit is to return a little normalcy to diplomatic missions in Moscow and DC. (5/)

But as I told [illegible] and the Brussels Sprouts podcast last year, we could sanction Russia to Timbuktu and back, and Putin still won't call off these efforts. (2/)

They're too cheap to implement (chump change when compared with defense budget) and too valuable in their return (in terms of creating an aura of importance around Moscow) for Putin to make a change in policy. He has little to lose from these ongoing influence activities. (3/)

Achieving some stability in our diplomatic missions is my main hope for tomorrow, honestly. And I'm not sure it's acheivable given the state of things right now.

Putin: "For some years now, we have received, already, from the [US], 10 requests about cyberattacks on American sites. And our colleagues are saying that this is coming from Russia. And we've had two this year. Last year and this year, our colleagues got an exhaustive response."

Eric Geller @ericgeller · 16m

Putin: "In its term, Russia sent, last year, to the relevant bodies of the U.S., 45 such demands, and the year before that, 35, and we haven't had a single reply to that. So that obviously means we've got some work on our plate."

Eric Geller @ericgeller · 16m

Putin: "So in terms of volume and frequency, we have to address that in a consultatory process. We believe that cyberspace is extraordinarily important in general, and in particular for the U.S. and, to the same extent, for Russia."

Really have to disagree here. Embassies have so many other purposes than simply talks between two countries. They handle passport renewal for US citizens living abroad, help for imprisoned Americans, not to mention holding the regime to account for its aggression around the world

Putin's whataboutism regarding US gun violence, alleged cyber and influence activities, Guantanamo, etc., are the same lines we've seen Russian propaganda outlets repeat over and over since 2012, and you'd better bet they'll be doubling down on them this afternoon, too

Biden says he "did what he came to do," setting the expectations for a future US-Russia relationship. Says tone was positive, some disagreements, but not done in a "hyperbolic atmosphere. That's been too much of what's been going on." Have to 100% agree there.

actors only to see others pop up. Like the carnival game of Whack-a-Mole, Whack-a-Troll is all but unwinnable; neither tech platforms nor governments nor journalists can fact-check their way out of the crisis of truth and trust Western democracy currently faces. Keeping people at the heart of Western policy on the Kremlin's influence campaigns is critical not only in responding to Russia's online offensives, but in repairing the cracks in our democracies that allowed them to begin in the first place. If we don't, our efforts will become another cautionary tale and another example of how to lose the information war.

This remains irrevocably true. However, what this article does not mention is that non-authoritarian countries have very often used these tactics. In international relations the finger is easily pointed at the 'other' while our "homes"/histories are filled with the same smoke

Since Putin needs the summit to validate his global-stage credentials, it no longer makes sense to belittle Biden as a doddering old man. Russian propaganda can turn on a dime, when necessary.

> After Putin today made a number of sympathetic remarks about Biden ("professional, very informed, never misses any details, his image constructed by the media couldn't be farther from the truth"), Russian state media seem to have made an abrupt U-turn. Not Sleepy Joe anymore

Election observation is not something anyone can simply "go and do." It requires training. It requires restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potentially violence.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

One of the things we look for when we are visiting polling stations in foreign countries is large crowds that are clearly there to agitate for one party or another. This is an indication that something is very wrong, that one group is trying to keep another away from the polls.

Hi. Multiple-time election observer here. You don't just send your supporters into polling places to "go and watch." If a leader of a foreign country did that, international organizations would be extraordinarily concerned.

Elect on observation is not someth ng anyone can simply "go and do." It requ res training. It requ res restraint. The fact that the President is encouraging his supporters to "go and watch" is inviting voter intimidation and potent ally violence.

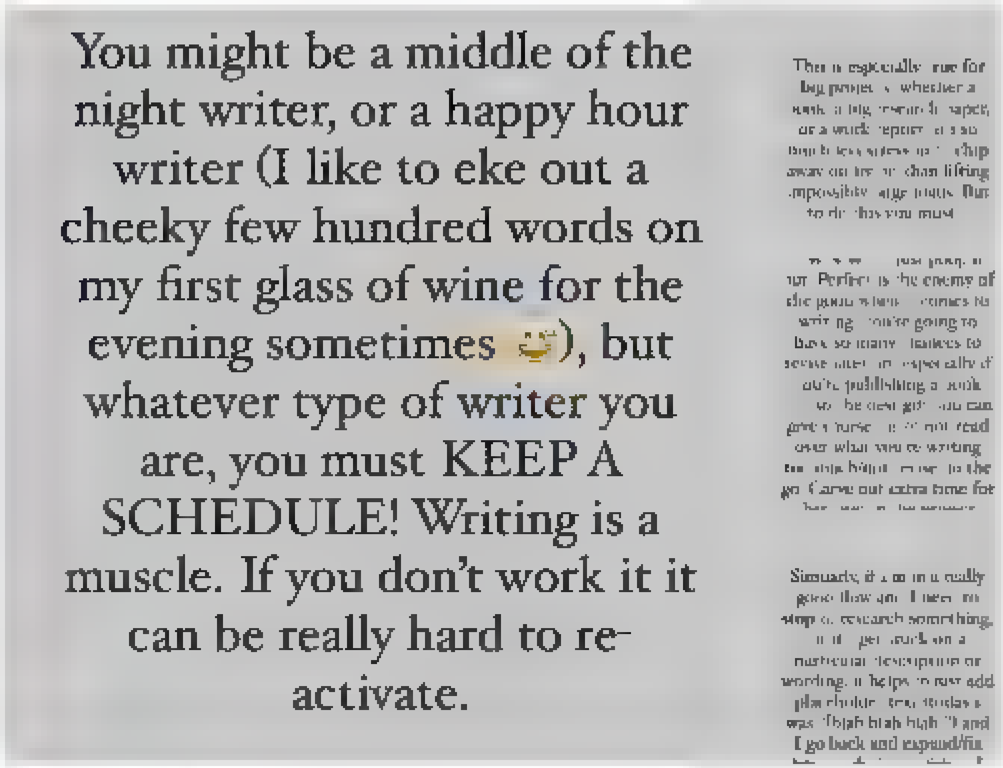
More tips. Get out of your own way/poop it out is my writing mantra. One is more dignified than the other. Oh well.



You might be a middle of the night writer, or a happy hour writer (I like to eke out a cheeky few hundred words on my first glass of wine for the evening sometimes 😉), but whatever type of writer you are, you must KEEP A SCHEDULE! Writing is a muscle. If you don't work it it can be really hard to re-activate.

Wikipedia is biased against women on every level. Fewer women editors. Fewer articles on women and stereotypically "feminine" interests. Women wikipedians get harassed more. But that's only the tip of the iceberg. Francesca shows

I get frustrated when I see "rigorous" and "evidence-based" applied exclusively (or even primarily) to quantitative research. Narrative research is also "rigorous." Stories are evidence. Emotions are evidence. Analysis of affective responses is evidence. History is evidence.

9:44 AM · 27 Jun 2021

Jesse Stommel @Jessifer · 19s

I bristle altogether at the phrase "evidence-based," because of the gatekeeping contexts where I so often see it used. I immediately wonder, what kind of evidence? What ways of knowing are being privileged? And at the expense of whose voices going unheard?

Jesse Stommel @Jessifer · 19s

And most meanings of the word "rigor" have no productive place in education, unless you believe school (and disciplinary culture) should be about policing, punishing, and gatekeeping — again with the effect of excluding already marginalized voices.

What this does is build community and trust through loosely described "infotainment," so that when RT runs a misleading broadcast about BLM, vaccines, January 6, the Occupy Movement, etc., there's already a modicum of brand trust with people who watched previous content. (2/)

HOW TO LOSE THE INFORMATION WAR was published one year ago today.

What a year. Like all of us, I've celebrated and suffered (perhaps a bit more of the latter), but I'm proud of the way this book has weathered an election, an insurrection, and everything in between.

This evening, Facebook suspended my Facebook account and the accounts of several people associated with Cybersecurity for Democracy, our team at NYU. This has the effect of cutting off our access to Facebook's Ad Library data, as well as Crowdtangle. 1/4

6:50 PM - 3 Aug 2021

Laura Edelson @LauraEdelson2 · 13h

Over the last several years, we've used this access to uncover systemic flaws in the Facebook Ad Library, identify misinformation in political ads including many sowing distrust in our election system, and to study Facebook's apparent amplification of partisan misinformation. 2/4

Laura Edelson @LauraEdelson2 · 13h

By suspending our accounts, Facebook has effectively ended all this work. Facebook has also effectively cut off access to more than two dozen other researchers and journalists who get access to Facebook data through our project. 3/4

Laura Edelson @LauraEdelson2 · 13h

Including our work measuring vaccine misinformation with the Virality Project and many other partners who rely on our data.

The work our team does to make data about disinformation on Facebook transparent is vital to a healthy internet and a healthy democracy. 4/4

Looking for ways to support Afghanistan and Afghan people? Here's a list of actions that you can take and avoid.

1) If you are not an expert on #Afghanistan, have not been keeping up with what has been occurring, and are not directly impacted by what is happening don't share your unsolicited opinions and takes.

7 · 223 · 1.7K

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
2) Instead follow and amplify the voices, work, and initiatives of Afghan activists, leaders, journalists, artists, and researchers.

3 · 118 · 1.2K

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
3) Find out if your government is deporting Afghans back to Afghanistan. Many governments around the world were deporting Afghan asylum seekers and only recently paused deportations.

4 · 172 · 1.1K

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
4) Avoid simplistic narratives that paint the situation as an internal dispute between tribes and factions. If you're not acknowledging the historic and ongoing role of various actors, then you're contributing to misinformation.

2 · 109 · 1.1K

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
5) The US and NATO allies benefitted from the support of local Afghans who are being targeted. Reach out to your political representatives and leaders to ensure that efforts are being made to evacuate and resettle these individuals and their families.

3 · 170 · 1.1K

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
The closing of embassies and withdrawal of ground presence and air support will make this more difficult. So #5 is time sensitive

1 · 60 · 703

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
6) Has your country agreed to resettle Afghan refugees? Help support resettlement efforts, not just with monetary donations but through community support. In Canada you can sign up here to volunteer/donate: canada.ca/en/immigration

2 · 138 · 789

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
7) Advocate for trauma-informed and culturally relevant supports for Afghan refugees and asylum seekers. Historically, mental health support has been underfunded and overlooked. PTSD, intergenerational trauma are real

2 · 96 · 812

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
8) Call for accountability and sanctions against actors who help bankroll the Taliban (and provide them with training and arms). This article gives some context: theconversation.com/the-taliban-ar…

9) Does your country sell weapons, military equipment, and surveillance tech to depots, human rights violators, oppressive regimes, and/dictators? It's likely your tax payer dollars are helping support these activities. Learn more here:

10) Fund the work of Afghan peacebuilders and activists around the world, especially youth, women, and gender and sexually diverse persons.

4 · 64 · 643

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
11) Speak out against the targeted attacks and ethnic cleansing of especially marginalized Afghan communities, including Hazara, Sikh, Hindu, and Shia Muslim people

2 · 76 · 642

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
12) Acknowledge the disproportionate cost of conflict on Afghan people. There has been a lot of rhetoric online about the costs the US and NATO has paid for its presence in Afghanistan, as well as blame on Afghan military forces.

1 · 63 · 559

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
13) Stop legitimizing the Taliban in peace negotiations. They will not suddenly respect human rights, especially women's rights. Escalating Taliban attacks against journalists, school children, and persecuted religious and ethnic groups indicate the gravity of the situation,

5 · 131 · 826

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
14) Displaced Afghans are being turned back at borders around the world. Support @Refugees' call to keep borders open to Afghans seeking asylum.

17) Amidst the escalating conflict, it is also vital that the international community mobilize to safeguard cultural heritage and sites in Afghanistan. Cultural cleansing and genocide threaten prospects for peace and contribute to the erasure of marginalized peoples.

2 · 51 · 475

Bushra Ebadi @Bushra_Ebadi · Aug 14
+ The looting of cultural artifacts and moveable heritage helps fund the activities of terrorist organizations. Many cultural institutions and collectors have been complicit. Learn more here:

At some point it would be nice if literally anyone discussed what those of us who got J&J should do or expect. We are a small contingent, sure, but speaking from my own experience, shouldering a disproportionate amount of stress because everyone acts like we don't exist

> Arnie Seipel, NPR @NPRnie

> Confirmed w/ source familiar with the discussions. Biden admin health officials coalescing around recommending boosters for vaccinated Americans 8 months after 2nd dose of a 2-dose vaccine. Would begin giving third shots in mid-late sept, pending FDA's ok @npr

J&J has a study of 2 shots v 1. I'm in that study (only got one shot) and looking forward to guidance on boosters as well. So, I'm with you on this.

Definitely looking forward to those results and hope there will be more info forthcoming about shot mixing- as a woman in an at risk group for j&j complications I'm not particularly keen to take another!

🚨These two accounts are circulating a big claim about a reporter. Neither of the accounts are verified or appear to actually be associated with @BBCNews or @CNN. They both were created in May, and one has only posted once. A few suspect domains are also circulating the claim.

There's absolutely a lexical issue in the field; most disinformation researchers will tell you that. Most disinformation researchers will also tell you that uninformed reporting has contributed to that problem 🙃

This is also a field that attracts a lot of grifters. I will not argue with that. But a more representative piece would have also looked at some of the earnest, world-improving measures that many of us have been involved with have done for no profit whatsoever.

For someone who is new to researching in this space, would you be willing to unpack what you mean by saying there is a 'lexical issue' in the field?

People using terms that are too broad, misusing them, using them to mean entirely different things. It's bound to happen w/ a field that has evolved so rapidly and there have been efforts to coalesce around a set of shared definitions. It's not like no one recognizes the proble,.

I think a lot of people don't truly appreciate that the Capitol is a place of work for thousands of ordinary, unelected people. Imagine how traumatizing it would be to have your workplace violently threatened, particularly now, just months after a deadly attack.

To be clear I m talk ng about staffers, reporters, people who work in any capacity n the Capito complex (custodial workers, food service workers gallery staff, etc), and police officers.

And this type of situation is obviously traumatizing for elected officials as well.

These assassination attempts aren't one-offs, but a consistent campaign of government sanctioned murders against opposition figures, activists and difficult people that has been going on for years.

We've already published about 6 targets of the FSB team that targeted Navalny and we still have a backlog of other likely targets we have to work through, and given the amount of activity by the FSB team there's certainly more targets we've yet to identify.

War is chaos. Ending war is chaos. But Afghans in Kabul I'm talking to have specific questions about why this one piece -- airport evacuations -- has become so dangerous and inhumane.

People are told to show up at airport. No contact name, number. Show up with your documents. Wave and yell and try to get soldiers' attention.

One evacuee I talked to asked why they can't announce names over a loudspeaker. Why they can't clear away those who dont have visas/paperwork to evacuate (many are showing up with HR documents and random papers to prove a US affiliation)

This evacuee missed his family's evacuation flight, trying for hours just to get within shouting/waving distance of the soldiers on the wall, because of the noise and chaos outside the airport.

It was clear from the text of this law that its proponents really do not have any clue how conception and the first few weeks of pregnancy work.

Well, now we know they don't know how rape works either. trib.al/oo3qoJu

AUSTIN (KXAN) — Texas Gov. Greg Abbott weighed in on a burning question related to the state's recently passed bill banning abortions after six weeks: what about victims of rape?

During a Tuesday press conference, Abbott said the law gives rape victims up to six weeks to get abortion and thus "does not do that [force victims to have their assaulter's child]."

"Let's be clear: rape is a crime," Abbott said. "And Texas will work tirelessly to make sure that we eliminate all rapists from the streets of Texas by aggressively going out and arresting them and prosecuting them and getting them off the streets."

Here's what I see now when I try to access Smart Vote's Telegram bot. In other words, Telegram disabled the bot globally, not just inside Russia. IN OTHER WORDS, Durov is censoring his network even more than Apple and Google are censoring their app stores. t.me/smartvotebot

This bot can't be displayed because it violated local laws.

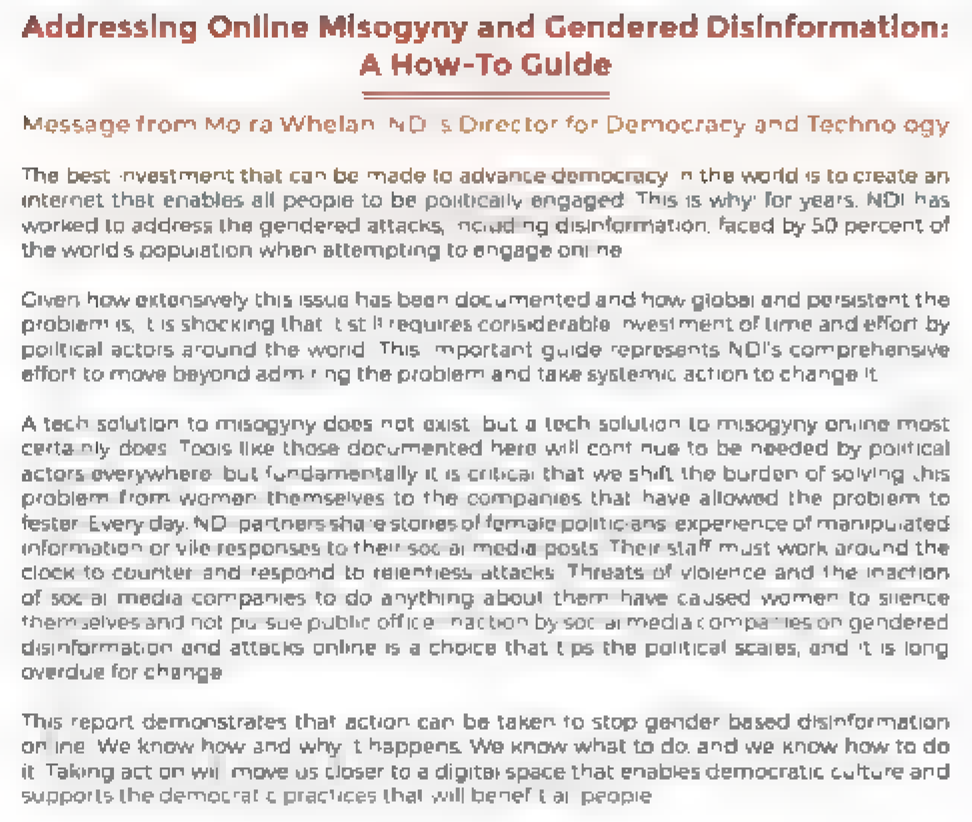
I wrote the forward for this one, and I share it here because in all of our work to help partners, it's important to note that this isn't an either/or thing: social media platforms still have a lot of work to do.



Addressing Online Misogyny and Gendered Disinformation: A How-To Guide

Message from Moira Whelan, NDI's Director for Democracy and Technology

The best investment that can be made to advance democracy in the world is to create an internet that enables all people to be politically engaged. This is why for years, NDI has worked to address the gendered attacks, including disinformation, faced by 50 percent of the world's population when attempting to engage online.

Given how extensively this issue has been documented and how global and persistent the problem is, it is shocking that it still requires considerable investment of time and effort by political actors around the world. This important guide represents NDI's comprehensive effort to move beyond admiring the problem and take systemic action to change it.

A tech solution to misogyny does not exist, but a tech solution to misogyny online most certainly does. Tools like those documented here will continue to be needed by political actors everywhere, but fundamentally it is critical that we shift the burden of solving this problem from women themselves to the companies that have allowed the problem to fester. Every day, NDI partners share stories of female politicians' experience of manipulated information or vile responses to their social media posts. Their staff must work around the clock to counter and respond to relentless attacks. Threats of violence and the inaction of social media companies to do anything about them have caused women to silence themselves and not pursue public office. Inaction by social media companies on gendered disinformation and attacks online is a choice that tips the political scales, and it is long overdue for change.

This report demonstrates that action can be taken to stop gender based disinformation online. We know how and why it happens. We know what to do, and we know how to do it. Taking action will move us closer to a digital space that enables democratic culture and supports the democratic practices that will benefit all people.

This also puts such a huge security burden on both reporters and newsrooms. Reporters have to have their information be fairly public sourcing and availability is key to the profession. But then you get a political leader posting your phone number

2 17 61

Jane Lytvynenko @JaneLytv 9h
It's awful that this is a reality newsrooms have to be prepared for. One of the posts from this leader includes a newsroom address. It s public information, sure but that's also scary. We've seen too much newsroom violence.

2 12 45

Jane Lytvynenko @JaneLytv 9h
I'm avoiding naming the leader so as to not point people toward this information. No need for that.

5 2 43

I had started working on the new addition around New Year's, and obviously, things changed quite drastically within a week. Needless to say, little of that draft made it into the new preface

Comments under a YouTube video posted about me highlight the sexualised and misogynistic nature of online hate targeting women.

It's a topic I'm investigating - and many I'm speaking to receive messages like this daily. Even worse when combined with other discriminatory hate.

Something I wish we spoke about more regarding the mpact of sexual vio ence and sexual harassment is how women's ambition, productivity, and creativity are iost when women are kicked out of school, fired, or otherwise diverted from their paths in the wake of report ng

We rightly talk a lot about how sexual abuse can warp women's emotional lives. But sexual harassment also has tremendous professional repercussions for its targets, and perhaps we less readily incorporate these into our assessments of sexual harassment's harm.

When I got Covid in 2020 and spent weeks in the hospital, it was harrowing. But it was nothing compared to what my family is dealing with now—also as a result of Covid.

This is a Covid horror story in which no one actually gets Covid, and it could still happen to anyone 🧵

In August my dad was living independently in rural New Mexico, as he has for years, in a beautiful place with a view of the mountains. He got vaxxed against Covid as soon as it was available, wore masks, and was waiting out the pandemic like the rest of us.

Then, he had a fall.

6 · 119 · 1.5K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
When I called and he admitted that he was in the hospital, he was more annoyed than anything else. He tripped, he hurt his leg, couldn't go home for a week or so. How irritating. How dumb. He blamed himself. He loved me, hoped I was well, he was fine, etc. That was the last call.

5 · 78 · 1.4K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
What happened was that while in the hospital, my dad caught viral pneumonia that went unnoticed. The whole state was in lockdown, and every hospital ICU was filling up with unvaccinated Covid patients. There weren't enough resources. The governor begged people to get vaxxed.

3 · 137 · 1.6K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
My dad was not in the ICU, but in a physical rehab unit of the hospital to help him with his leg. They now say they did not know he had pneumonia at that point. He collapsed on the floor in his room and was left there, unnoticed, for six hours.

17 · 123 · 1.7K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
When they found him he was blue and had an oxygen level of 50. He did not have Covid. He was taken to the ER and put on a ventilator, but they had to put him in a storage room because there physically not enough space due to all the unvaccinated Covid cases.

6 · 155 · 1.7K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
Twenty-four hours later, he was off the vent and his oxygen levels were restored. My siblings, who live closer, flew in. I spoke to him, and he was out of it but okay. Surely he would get treatment now. We thought that was the worst of it. It was not.

1 · 79 · 1.4K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
It was later explained to me that this hospital decided to re-intubate my father due to a lack of hospital resources. They couldn't manage. He could not see a cardiologist or a pulmonologist, they were all busy. They could not run the needed tests. So they kept him on the vent.

8 · 120 · 1.4K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
In normal circumstances, they simply would have transferred my dad to a larger hospital. There were several close by. It would have been routine. But due to Covid, it was impossible—so impossible, they thought, that they didn't even tell me he needed to be transferred.

4 · 94 · 1.5K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
A few days later, while I had thought my dad was improving—I kept being reassured by the nurses when I called—I finally called and got an exhausted, angry nurse who said bluntly: "we are tapped out and because of that your father is going to die. Maybe today. I'm sorry."

6 · 174 · 1.6K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 4h
I demanded to speak to the doctor and he said more or less the same thing. The state was maxed out. My dad needed a cardiac ICU bed, or at least a cardiologist, and there was nothing for him. There was no hope, and no point even trying. Everywhere was full of the unvaccinated.

7 · 181 · 1.7K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
Now, there have been other stories like ours in the news over the past month or so. There was the father who was turned away from 43 ICUs and sadly passed away. People were being flown across state lines to try to save them, their families in terror, the health systems in chaos.

4 · 97 · 1.5K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
My dad's doctor said that New Mexico's ICU bed planning was centralized, so there was no point calling NM hospitals, but I could try ICUs in CO, AZ, TX, UT, CA—even though, he said, they had already tried all those. He would try again. I could call. I think he was humoring me.

4 · 74 · 1.3K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
The doctor said to "send him any leads" so when I called the hospitals, I said I was calling on his behalf. I never said I was his assistant or medical staff, but they talked to me. They were all maxed out. Nothing they could do.

4 · 60 · 1.3K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
After about five panicked hours of contacting every hospital, every person I could think of, and screaming my helplessness into the maw of the internet to see if anyone, anyone at all could help us, we finally reached a doctor in an ABQ hospital ICU who agreed to admit my dad.

2 · 78 · 1.5K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
So that was two weeks ago. If he'd gotten to that ICU even hours later, we would have lost him. They had to perform heroic acts to stabilize him. In a week his pneumonia had been brought under control, and he was starting to heal. They talked about a full recovery. However.

1 · 73 · 1.9K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
By that point my dad had been on a vent for more than ten days, simply because of a lack of access to care. If you're a med professional, you know why this matters. All signs looked good and so they decided to extubate him. At first he tolerated it, and then... he didn't.

3 · 77 · 1.5K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
Three days later, they had to intubate my dad for the third time. They said that doing this could result in a permanent disability. He could fully recover, but he also might not ever be independent again.

1 · 62 · 1.3K

Summer Brennan @summerbrennan · 3h
They gave me the option of "making him comfortable" instead, and you know what that means. But I'm my dad's PoA and he'd been clear that he wanted people to fight for him in a circumstance like this, so I said no. I told them to fight and do whatever they could to save him.

I also think these hearings serve a purpose that we often ignore: raising awareness of these issues within the public sphere. The press can begin that drive, and Congress can keep (a certain portion of) public attention trained on topics they consider important.

I'm not the victim here - this domestic abuser's ex-wife is the victim. 100% fear for other women/girls in his life this is the predator's go-to response when a bystander woman reminds them of their abuse

What we've just heard from @FrancesHaugen about the "skittles party" ad pushing drug paraphernalia to children slipping through the system's AI is something that abusers and disinformers are exploiting, as we explained in #MalignCreativity

I am glad this conversation is happening; it would have been nice if we had had it in 2017...Or if any of the times we had it between 2018 and today it had led to bipartisan action. We've lost so much time.

Facebook's aggressive, kinda smug pushback response, undermining the credibility of Frances Haugen, its own internal researchers, and outside researchers last month is an interesting strategy. I'm no expert, is there a way that this is good PR? (Seriously asking.)

Make your favorite bread pudding, with your favorite recipe. While it's warm, or later when you rewarm it, add a shot of your favorite Single Malt Scotch to the individual portion, followed by a scoop of your favorite vanilla ice cream. I promise it's delicious.

I have always admired @mariaressa not just for her courage in standing up to the Duterte regime, but in standing up another regime that is larger, more influential and perhaps more dangerous: Facebook.

Two weeks ago [illegible] tried twice to make the headline to my essay "I Spent a Year Inside Facebook" & I said no it's misleading & has nothing to do with the story. They listened, but too few know you can push back on this.

While I accept this article's main thrust- that Facebook's study on teenage girls was likely not optimally designed and inconclusive- I would also respectfully posit that it may have been designed to limit the harmful conclusions about Facebook. (1/)

Often these instances of harm were encouraged by the affordances and infrastructures of the platforms themselves. So let's assume that maybe I just talked to the 30% of women affected by these structural issues. (3/)

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 58m

Isn't that 30% too many to deal with psychological harm amplified and perpetuated for profit by a technology that's supposed to be improving their daily lives? 30% too many to be dealing with abuse and harassment? (4/)

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 32m

The argument in the piece is letting Facebook and other social media companies off the hook for the real world harm that these platforms cause. It's like Nick Clegg's comment from a few months (?) ago that "the vast majority of content on FB is positive." (5/)

How many cat videos or baby pics offset trauma? Lost work hours? Fear of stalkers? Social isolation? Yes, social media can be used for good, but that shouldn't undermine the call for these companies to make sure they don't do harm. (6/6)

The argument in the piece is letting Facebook and other social media companies off the hook for the real world harm that these platforms cause. It's like Nick Clegg's comment from a few months (?) ago that 'the vast majority of content on FB is positive.' (5/)

How many cat videos or baby pics offset trauma? Lost work hours? Fear of stalkers? Social isolation? Yes, social media can be used for good, but that shouldn't undermine the call for these companies to make sure they don't do harm. (6/6)

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia makes an important point in this @newlinesmag podcast on #disinformation: social media companies know abuse is happening online, and they are perfectly able to spot terrorist content and "follow it around the internet". So why not with disinformation?

While I accept this article's main thrust that Facebook's study on teenage girls was likely not optimally designed and inconclusive- I would also respectfully posit that it may have been designed to limit the harmful conclusions about Facebook. (1/)

With the caveat that my work falls much more on the anthropological/qualitative side of the spectrum than the quantitative, I would also point out that every young & adult woman I spoke to for my new book admitted to me some psychological harm that social media caused them. (2/)

On the death of Colin Powell (a short thread):

One thing I have been perversely grateful for during the pandemic is that my father did not live to see it. He died of complications from Multiple Myeloma in 2011; this blood/bone marrow cancer wreaks havoc on the immune system.

Colin Powell also suffered from multiple myeloma. Any reporting that mentions Powell's COVID-19 vaccination status but not that his body was essentially unable to fight infections is not doing its due diligence Sending my condolences to his family.

(And yes, before you ask, several of the "biggest" news outlets in our country don't mention that he suffered from myeloma. It's appalling, fear-mongering, and endemic of the poor reporting and shallow discourse that has in part contributed to vaccine hesitancy in the US.)

(And yes, before you ask, several of the "biggest" news outlets in our country don't mention that he suffered from myeloma. It's appalling, fear-mongering, and endemic of the poor reporting and shallow discourse that has in part contributed to vaccine hesitancy in the US.)

If you want to donate to a great charity that does research to cure this horrible disease, I suggest @theMMRF, where I channeled a lot of my grief after my dad died, raising tens of thousands during their annual 5ks.

Yes, Colin Powell was vaccinated. But he also had blood cancer, which devastates the immune system.

What his tragic death illustrates isn't the futility of vaccines but the importance of everyone else getting vaccinated to protect society's most vulnerable

Nina, I'm sorry to hear about your father. I lost both of my parents to cancer, and it's still very painful. I would like to ask what is your source that Powell had multiple myeloma. His death is sad no matter what the cause, but it's weird there's no sourcing for this claim?

Colin Powell also suffered from multiple myeloma. Any reporting that mentions Powell's COVID-19 vaccination status but not that his body was essentially unable to fight infections is not doing its due diligence

I agree that this should have been included in a prepared obituary. But, unfortunately, I'm not sure the fact that multiple myeloma contributed to his death from Covid would have necessarily passed fact checking without the family saying it.

And, of course, I don't blame the grieving family for what they chose to include. But Powell was a well-known, respected public figure and had a spokesperson, so I also don't find the idea of mentioning this in the statement far-fetched

Not blame, but I think they were the source of the confusion. They didn't include his health status, but included his COVID and vaccination status

So it seems kinda logical why so many outlets would botch the announcement and you're correct, earlier versions did not include mentions of his cancer, but simply repeated the family's statement on facebook

Cancer would be a complicating factor for any person who got COVID though- it is worth noting for any high profile fully vaxxed individual because it chemo & other cancer treatments make them immunocompromised. You don't need to be a specialist to know that.

Yes, it definitely should have been mentioned. I simply think many news outlets would not have drawn a straight line between his cancer diagnosis and Covid without the family/a spokesperson saying that first.

Matthew Kupfer @Matthew_Kupfer · 18m

Of course, if that info were included (even with no conclusions drawn), it still would have been helpful.

Seeing a lot of news alerts and headlines saying Colin Powell died of COVID while vaccinated, but virtually none of them mention that he had a massive co-morbidity: multiple myeloma, or blood cancer. This kind of thing is part of the problem

We hear that to get the docs, outlets had to agree to the conditions and a schedule laid down by the PR team that worked on earlier leaked docs.

That's a major SEC violation, given that execs have repeatedly given deceptive comments on this issue, to regulators, in earnings calls, annual shareholder meetings and (under oath) in Congress. 4

Facebook moved too quickly to removed its election protection measures.

In disinformation campaigns, Election Day is an inflection point, not an end point.

Facebook's staunch defense of free speech only applies to Western, English-speaking countries; The @washingtonpost that Zuckerberg "personally decided that Facebook would comply" with the Vietnamese govt's demands to censor "anti-state" posts.

This is a key point that researchers have been underlining for years. Facebook is often touting that it removes huge amounts of hate speech that it finds, but has never publicly admitted that there is a large universe of posts that never cross moderators' screens.

This is a key point in ... the study I led ... around gendered abuse in the 2020 election. Because abusers are good at adapting to platform rules to avoid detection, their violative posts are often not found by platform systems.

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia 6h

It also means that posts like this, released after ... whistleblowing, aren't worth very much. We know that FB isn't finding all the hate speech on its platform. Even if it were, comparing the effect of cat pics to vitriol is not valid.

Strongly identify with this sentiment from @cwarzel's latest newsletter. warzel.substack.com/p/sowhat-now

What the hell happens now?

Yesterday was a profoundly disorienting day for me, a run-of-the-mill bearded white guy who has written and reported critically about Facebook for ten years now. This will sound dumb but it feels a little like how I imagine it must feel to have a kid graduating high school. It's kind of a momentous day and you feel really personally involved but at the end of the day it's not really your thing/accomplishment. In the grand scheme of 'Reckoning With Facebook' something important happened this week. It feels like it marks the end of one chapter and the beginning of a new one. But I'm not sure what happens now.

Annia is right. By not including non-Western reporters in the Facebook Papers consortium, the group is undoubtedly missing details that outlets with local insight could contextualize and use to make change.

Ironically, this is the same mistake that Facebook itself has made.

Incensed about the paid parental leave "discourse" in this country today

Reminder to men: you're not supporting WOMEN while we're raising children. WE are supporting YOU, doing unpaid, underappreciated labor making the household run while pursue your career, uninterrupted.

It does not make you less masculine to support your partner after she grew and birthed another human and recovers from a traumatic medical event.

It does not make you less masculine to bond with your newborn.

It makes you a better "provider," if that helps you swallow it.

I don't want anything to do with the metaverse, particularly if Facebook is building it.

There are a range of harms that proliferate in VR technology we already have. Facebook has no business dabbling in this realm until it's able to demonstrate responsible tech stewardship.

Strongly identify with this sentiment from @cwarzel's latest newsletter. warzel.substack.com/p/sowhat-now

What the hell happens now?

Yesterday was a profoundly disorienting day for me, a run-of-the-mill bearded white guy who has written and reported critically about Facebook for ten years now. This will sound dumb but it feels a little like how I imagine it must feel to have a kid graduating high school. It's kind of a momentous day and you feel really personally involved but at the end of the day it's not really your thing/accomplishment. In the grand scheme of 'Reckoning With Facebook' something important happened this week. It feels like it marks the end of one chapter and the beginning of a new one. But I'm not sure what happens now.

Yesterday was a profoundly disorienting day for me, a run-of-the-mill bearded white guy who has written and reported critically about Facebook for ten years now. This will sound dumb but it feels a little like how I imagine it must feel to have a kid graduating high school. It's kind of a momentous day and you feel really personally involved but at the end of the day it's not really your thing/accomplishment. In the grand scheme of 'Reckoning With Facebook' something important happened this week. It feels like it marks the end of one chapter and the beginning of a new one. But I'm not sure what happens now.

Have loved seeing these stories all day, if only because it's interesting to see that so many of us who study Eastern Europe exist because of WWII.

Here's my fam. My granddad as a boy second is from L. In 1940, his family would be sent to a work camp outside Archankgelsk.

Yet another reason why it's so critical Virginians get out and vote. Ben Shapiro and The Daily Wire have made this into a full blown case of anti trans disinformation. twitter.com/transscribe/st …

> But the facts of the case don't match up with the trans stranger danger happening that they have painted it to be. The sexual assaulter didn't lie secretly in wait for his victim to unknowingly enter the stall next to him. Instead the meetup was arranged beforehand. The attacker and victim had had sex in the same bathroom before. This time, however, the girl said no, and the boy didn't stop. The crime is no less awful, and should be outright condemned. But it was not the attack facilitated by a trans-friendly bathroom policy as conservatives claimed it was.
> In fact, the school had not yet implemented its trans bathroom inclusion policy when the assault took place.

When pregnant people grow a baby they also grow a whole new organ (placenta) which they expel at birth, leaving an organ-wound inside. Just curious: if you dropped a kidney out of your body how many weeks minimum would you like to heal just from that physical trauma?

Have loved seeing these stories all day, if only because it's interesting to see that so many of us who study Eastern Europe exist because of WWII.

Here's my fam. My granddad as a boy second is from L. In 1940, his family would be sent to a work camp outside Archankgelsk.

If you've been following me over this past week, you know that someone was harassing me on here under an alt, I figured out who they are, and they tried to run away and pretend it was nbd.

After consulting w/ a Rabbi, I got their number & called them yesterday. A few thoughts:

I dont want to talk about this person specifically because I believe that by the end of the 40 minute conversation, his apologies were genuine. For now, assuming the abuse does not start again, that is sufficient for me.

I want to talk about the culture around him.

Dr. Hannah Lebovits @Hannah_Lebovits · 24m
The first half of the conversation was a fear apology. He got caught. He was wrong. Scared. He's not a young adult in his mom's basement. He has a reputation to protect and was worried I would destroy him. But then the conversation changed.

This is a BIG DEAL. A couple quick thoughts:

1) This moment is a win. It's good to celebrate wins in the struggle for justice in the tech space.

2) This win was made possible by the foundational work of Black women computer scientists like @jovialjoy, @rajiinio, @timnitGebru

Have loved seeing these stories all day, if only because it's interesting to see that so many of us who study Eastern Europe exist because of WWII.

Here's my fam. My granddad as a boy second is from L. In 1940, his family would be sent to a work camp outside Archankgelsk.

This is the biggest step a US President has taken to curb the abuse of spyware. Worth noting it also keeps US-based brokers like Zerodium from selling zero-day exploits to NSO. Big Q is will USG go harder and use Magnitsky Act to freeze NSO's assets, as @RonWyden others suggest.

Columnist, [illegible] Author "Why We're Polarized" Host of "The Ezra Klein Show" podcast

I'm on paternity leave until January

But. Parental leave should be universal, and it should be universally taken. And not just so men can be helpmates to their wives, who're doing the Real Work.

Men should take paternity leave because they should care for their children, and experience the love that grows out of caring for their children.

To miss that is to parent (and live) in grayscale, not color.

I've seen a lot of older men who have no idea how to care for babies. They can't change a diaper, they don't know how to quiet a tantrum. They hold the baby for a minute and pass them back. They want to connect and build a relationship, but they can't. It's a lifelong loss.

This is something @AlisonGopnik says, and it's among the most important lines I've ever heard. We don't just care for others because we love them. We love them because we perform acts of care for them.

To be a woman on the internet is an inherently dangerous act.

Thrilled to announce my next project. So excited to work with @tomaszhoskins on another book and continue share what I've learned.

This is something we recommend in #MalignCreativity - "Create clear standards that prohibit the use of gendered and sexualized insults on official Congressional social media properties, and adopt codes of conduct censuring gender-based abuse by Members."

Soooo does the House not have rules about their members making videos about killing their colleagues?? Isn't this the kind of thing that ought to be censured or sanctioned, or are we just in an "anything goes" phase at this point

Find myself thinking that the utterly insane video shared by Rep. Gosar that depicts violence to @AOC is, sadly, par for the course in what @wiczipedia et al dubbed the "malign creativity" of trolls that target female politicians.

Having fought in WWI, the newly independent Polish government compensated his father (top L above) for his service with a land grant in a village that would become Hallerczyn (after Polish General Haller) outside of Lviv.

Today it's called Vysotsko. I visited in 2017.

Next week I am visiting three countries in Europe (two for work, one for pleasure) before returning home to the US, and it is SHOCKING how much conflicting information about COVID travel requirements exists on the internet. Truly, this should be easier.

And it can be- we went to Bermuda for a last-minute trip at the end of the summer after the caseload in Hawaii got out of hand. Bermuda has an EXCELLENT IDIOT PROOF system. Still stressful, but ran smoothly, and you didn't need to be a professional researcher to figure it out.

I should also note that two of the countries I'm visiting are in the EU, and you'd expect the requirements to be similar but NOPE

Anyway, I am happy to be traveling again, but I have a lot of ire to the COVID Testing Industrial Complex this morning. Fin

For @WIRED, I wrote about one of the craziest engagement tactics I've ever seen: By default, TikTok now shares your profile with anyone you share videos with. You also get a notification if they click on the link

In other words, if you send a TikTok video on a dating app, that person will be able to access your profile and vice versa. TikTok seemingly does this by embedding a unique code into the URL when you share a video outside the platform. It's pure chaos!!

Quick thread:

There is, finally, good news from the anti-vaccine beat.

It's wrapped in some bad news.

The good: Mandates are working. Anti-vaxxers are exhausted, giving in and getting the shot.

The bad: They're running home to "detox" in weird ways, hoping to "undo" it.

Antivaxxers on Facebook/TikTok are begging for advice on how to "detox" loved ones who got the shot

They caved to mandates and want help from influencers

Some say they're doomed to death, infertility, or government tracking

But others have "remedies."

We have some exciting news for you!

⚡We are launching a newsletter today. Subscribe here: bit.ly/3HqwnSg

⚡We are moving forward with the formation of a new publication and are happy to announce @olya_rudenko as Editor-in-Chief. More details in the statement below.

The fired team of the independent Kyiv Post is grateful for the tremendous support we've received from you throughout this crisis.

A week ago, the Kyiv Post as we know it ceased to exist. The good news is that we continue to carry on its values and spirit!

We are now moving to launch a new media outlet with 30 ex-Kyiv Post employees onboard to continue its legacy.

The independent Kyiv Post might be gone, but its team is united and eager to keep serving you, our community.

We are happy to announce that Olga Rudenko, former deputy chief editor at the Kyiv Post, who dedicated 10 years to the brand, will lead our editorial team.

She will take on the role of Editor-in-Chief of the new publication.

Jnomics Media, a media consultancy firm based in London and Kyiv, will be responsible for the business side of our new project.

We have partnered with Jnomics as we believe that we share common values and envision the new media outlet the same way.

The founders of Jnomics are Kyiv Post alumni Jakub Parusinski and Daryna Shevchenko. They have a personal connection with the team and are inspired to help us build the publication. Parusinski and Shevchenko will be stepping in as Chief Financial Officer and Chief Executive Officer, respectively.

We are currently working on creating a legal entity, outlining a strategy and securing partnerships with our community.

We invite you to join us! If you are keen to contribute in any way, provide support or become a subscriber, please, leave your contact details here https://bit.ly/3kBSXgW

Today, we are also launching our first editorial product, a newsletter.

We feel a duty to keep informing you about the most crucial events in politics, business, culture, and more.

We will be sending out our newsletter shortly. If you would like to receive our newsletter, please subscribe here: https://mailchi.mp/9d739c3b1dd3/ukraine-daily

Rolling out a new media outlet will take some time and we appreciate your patience. However, we are inspired by the challenge of creating a modern, trust-worthy, and self-sustaining publication.

Want to be a part of it? This week we are launching a crowdfunding campaign on GoFundMe and a Patreon page. We are thankful for any contribution.

But you can support us in any way. One is by helping us publicize our crowdfunding efforts. We rely on your support!

We are starting something new and forward-looking. But whatever we do next will still be us, a team adhering to the highest professional and ethical standards in journalism.

Thank you for being with us.

The team of your new media in the making

Infuriatingly, we didn't have enough access to FB data to include a properly comparative look at Facebook and Instagram against the other platforms we studied in ..., but we did use CrowdTangle to stay abreast of the keywords and classifiers abusers were using. (2/)

Although FB isn't included in the report's dataset, broadly, all the trends that we noted for the six platforms we pulled data for were true on FB/IG. Moreover, many of our focus group participants noted that the FB universe's reporting procedures were frustratingly opaque. (3/)

This story has a lot, but the biggest takeaway has to be that Facebook lied to an independent investigator that sought to do a civil rights audit.

I'm not sure anything surprises me about FB any more, but this shows the limits of self regulation.

Very excited to see my friend and colleague @cjcmichel's new book out on shelves. I'm so excited to dig into this, and you should pick up a copy too. Casey is a brilliant and trenchant writer and ALWAYS worth a read. Congratulations Casey!!!

When we talk about the harm caused by social media, it's a mistake to think about averages. New write-up from me in @conversationUS.

It seems there may be a common theme of concern for the diluting effects from blending case specific risks into much larger statistical bases, like macro pops?

I insist that Dulles unfairly gets a bad rap. With Global Entry and not checking bags I have done plane-to-taxi in 20 minutes loads of times. The people mover is not really more time than walking 1.2km and/or taking an "aerotrain" in your average airport

Yea... this is what I came here to say. It would be one thing to schlep to a cab from the airplane... but waiting in the people mover is the worst.

Agree on global entry and bags- but every Covid era journey I've had that ends in the people mover is hugely frustrating! Crowded into a stuffy, slow moving van with inconsiderate fellow passengers who refuse to move to the back… ahhhh, America 🇺🇸

I had the gift of performing some of Sondheim's most beautiful music as The Witch in Into the Woods in autumn 2019, my last show before the pandemic. I'm absolutely brokenhearted about his passing, but the world is so much richer for what he has given us.

Cool!! This was the last musical I did after doing 20 shows in 10 years. I was Cinderella's Prince. The thing that finally got me to stop was... I was cast against a 22 y/o Cinderella and I was 52! At least the Bakers wife was in her 30's! Lol

Yet another reason why it's so critical Virginians get out and vote. Ben Shapiro and The Daily Wire have made this into a full blown case of anti trans disinformation. twitter.com/transscribe/st …

> But the facts of the case don't match up with the trans stranger danger happening that they have painted it to be. The sexual assaulter didn't lie secretly in wait for his victim to unknowingly enter the stall next to him. Instead the meetup was arranged beforehand. The attacker and victim had had sex in the same bathroom before. This time, however, the girl said no, and the boy didn't stop. The crime is no less awful, and should be outright condemned. But it was not the attack facilitated by a trans-friendly bathroom policy as conservatives claimed it was.
> In fact, the school had not yet implemented its trans bathroom inclusion policy when the assault took place.

Good. I totally avoided public transit when I was in London last week because of lax masking. Also got into a argument with an English woman across from me on the Eurostar who refused to put her mask on. 🙃

And Facebook, Youtube, Google, you name them, are totally unaccountable for their actions. The only powers who could reign them in are the EU Commision and the US Congress. At least some hefty fine for autocrat-cuddling censorship is required.

1️⃣ Call disinformation what it is. It's not a problem of "information integrity." Democratic allies—including invitees to the Summit, such as Brazil, the Phillippines, and Poland—have been using it on their own populations. If we use euphamisms we can't address domestic disinfo.

There is an argument that women need to be bolder and more self promoting. But I think many of us feel tacitly uncomfortable with that not only because of societal expectations, but because you get a bunch of awful abuse and casual misogyny as a woman who is.

This is why I cannot tolerate and will continue to call out the casual misogyny that pervades online discourse. I am sure some of these guys really don't realize how demeaning their messages are, but when they come on the back of a request for feet pics… well, you lose patience.

And yes, there is definitely more than a little casual misogyny motivating the men who send me their writing after I publish my own, with no offer to compare notes or cooperate. There is more than a little misogyny binding those who ask me to organize events for them.

Also, particularly with abuse and hate speech as we've seen in recent weeks, as well as with the use of disinfo in legislative session, we need to see some much stronger rules adopted in Congress. The House updated some of their rules about floor debates but didn't go far enough.

A great reminder that Ukrainians have been waking every day for nearly 8 years w/ Russian troops on their borders and occupying their lands. Speculating about troop buildup & invasion scenarios may be an abstract intellectual exercise to analysts but very real to 40m Ukrainians.

With more than 90% of ballots counted, I'm struck by the magnitude of Zelenskiy's victory.

You can perhaps argue that many of these were votes against Poroshenko, not for Ze.

Regardless, this is still 12 million+ Ukrainians uniting for change.

Biden, Zelenskyy, call on Russia to de-escalate tensions.

Biden "made clear that the United States and its allies and partners are committed to the principle of "no decisions or discussions about Ukraine without Ukraine," per WH readout.

#RussianAggression

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
December 9, 2021

Readout of President Joe Biden's Call with European Allies

President Joseph R. Biden, Jr. spoke today with President Volodymyr Zelenskyy of Ukraine. President Biden voiced the deep concerns of the United States and our European Allies about Russia's aggressive actions towards Ukraine and made clear that the U.S. and our Allies would respond with strong economic and other measures in the event of a further military intervention. He reaffirmed the United States' unwavering commitment to Ukraine's sovereignty and territorial integrity. President Biden made clear that the United States and its allies and partners are committed to the principle of "no decisions or discussions about Ukraine without Ukraine." The leaders called on Russia to de-escalate tensions and agreed that diplomacy is the best way to make meaningful progress on conflict resolution. President Biden underscored the readiness of the United States to engage in support of confidence-building measures to advance the implementation of the Minsk Agreements, in support of the Normandy Format.

I do. With audiobooks the narrator makes or breaks it a lot of the time. But there are loads of amazing non-fic books with their own authors reading it. Key thing is to get the passion to come across and not give a feel of just reading off a page.

Just want to be clear that this extremely Christmas-branded allegedly "snowflake" Peppermint Patty is absolutely a Magen David

It's like these middle aged white guys can't believe that I don't have a portfolio or a depth of thought about an issue I've devoted my career to beyond a 1500 word piece they (maybe, if they have a FA login) skimmed

I really don't want to be a pivot for your online flexing and networking. You don't need to read my entire portfolio before you leave a LinkedIn comment, but maybe read the piece and do a quick google search to see what else I've written before you reduce me to an idiot. Thanks.

Unfortunately this isn't a Twitter only problem. Too often in the tech world, the most malign uses of platforms—for hate speech, abuse, and worse—are overlooked or become afterthoughts, when they should be primary considerations.

The report makes clear that social media platforms cannot self-regulate when it comes to online misogyny and VAWG, and recommends making such abuse illegal when it leads to serious psychological harm. Kudos to @DamianColl ns and the entire committee for their diligent work. (2/2)

Unlike stirring up racial hatred, there is currently no criminal offence of stirring up hatred against women (though we support the Law Commission's recommendation to create one), nor is misogyny a hate crime. Under the draft Bill, such acts would be regulated as part of the service provider's terms of service and their commitment to act on misogynistic abuse online. We do not believe this should be left to platforms. Where the abuse and harassment of women and girls leads to serious psychological harm, it should be criminalised. We recommend that services should be required to identify and effectively mitigate risks caused by misogynistic abuse resulting from the way their systems and processes operate. We also recommend that they be required to address functionality that could be used in domestic abuse or VAWG, such as geolocation, and act to reduce those risks.

I don't like the Twitter is amplifying the gendered barb that Elon Musk appropriated from anti-racists because a United States Senator suggested he might pay more taxes and his feelings were hurt.

It shouldn't be news; media shouldn't cover it and platforms shouldn't amplify it.

Another great change from Twitter. The only thing I'd add is the ability to create event reports—going through this process for individual tweets when getting dogpiled would still be arduous, even though it's more humane than the current one.

Now we work together to chase out the disease through nourishment and monitoring, love and care. Eventually through nutrition and replenishment, their neurological system will slowly rebalance itself and we can begin to rebuild. I didn't know this was a brain disease. But it is.

And I do think COVID play some role here. The isolation. The anxiety. The social fucked-up-ness. Everything out of control. It is so hard to find care right now. Everyone is booked up. Programs are full. Doctor says they are seeing more cases in a month than they see in a year.

Interesting note about this, I didn't want to write it. It seemed too obvious, because violent threats to the Capitol and politicians inside who dared dispute election lies were everywhere, flooding every mainstream platform. Is this even news, I wondered? Glad we documented it.

the Capitol that day. We seem to have buried in our collective consciousness the very human cost of January 6: the lives lost, the injuries sustained, the people whose daily routines have irreparably changed and become intrinsically dangerous. As early as that evening, a collective amnesia fell over 147 Members of Congress who had already forgotten, as I wrote for Foreign Affairs that week, "the day the internet came for them."

NEW: The WH releases this excerpt from the speech that President Biden will deliver this morning to mark the first anniversary of the January 6th assault on the Capitol:

"And so at this moment we must decide what kind of nation we are going to be..."

And so at this moment we must decide what kind of nation we are going to be.
Are we going to be a nation that accepts political violence as a norm?
Are we going to be a nation where we allow partisan election officials to overturn the legally expressed will of the people?
Are we going to be a nation that lives not by the light of the truth but in the shadow of lies?
We cannot allow ourselves to be that kind of nation.
The way forward is to recognize the truth and to live by it.

My instinct is that is right, we shouldn't use disinfo as a weapon. However, The thread you've cited only raises morality, competency and whataboutism as reasons not to. That's not a strong argument from a strategic/pragmatic perspective. Interested in your thoughts.

In my opinion it's the only perspective. We cannot fight disinfo when we're using it ourselves. If we use it, while it may "win" battles in the short term (and I'm not convinced there, given our track record), in the long term it is a huge detriment to our credibility.

An important warning Nuland makes here is that Russia is planning "false flag" ops. In other words, they are going to try to create the pretext for an invasion, like inventing an attack on Russian troops that didn't happen.

Under Secretary Victoria Nuland @UnderSecStateP
Russia has created this crisis out of whole cloth and will have to justify to its people why it is stoking a potentially very bloody & costly conflict for Russia, rather than focusing on its own citizens' health and on Russia's own significant challenges in building

Interesting to compare this situation to Georgia 2008; back then, when the Georgian MFA's website was defaced, the Ministry was forced to use a blogspot blog and send messages through Poland's MFA. Ukraine's MFA has been quite active on social media; it's paying off.

I'm dismayed to see the BBC on the chopping block in the UK; I believe it is not only a key to UK citizens' resiliency against disinformation, but an important soft power tool abroad. As I write in HOW TO LOSE THE INFORMATION WAR, I'd love to see the US make similar investments.

> not only through the variety of philanthropic initiatives to support the industry that have proliferated since 2016, but through further government investment in public broadcasters. In 2018, the US government allocated $447 million to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which funds the Public Broadcasting Station and National Public Radio, as well as their local affiliates. In comparison, the British Broadcasting Corporation's budget for the same year was over $6 billion, despite the fact that Britain's GDP is about a fifth of the size of the United States.[34] The BBC did not save Britain from the influence of foreign disinformation, an investigation into Russian information campaigns during the run-up to the Brexit referendum is ongoing. However, the British population turns to the BBC when looking for a trusted news source; in a 2017 poll, 57 percent of those surveyed said they were mostly likely to turn to the BBC for "news [they trusted] the most." No other news outlet, online, in print, or on television, scored more than 11 percent.[35]

Pregnancy apps, I quickly learned, aren't in the business of providing comfort; they are a fantasy-land-cum-horror-show, providing little realistic information about the journey to parenthood. They capitalize on the excitement and anxiety of moms-to-be. "

There've been dozens of reports in recent weeks of public offices, schools, metro stations being "mined." Now Ukraine says this is a Russian campaign to sow fear & chaos as it masses troops on its border & threatens new invasion. See @olgatokariuk's thread twitter.com/olgatokariuk/s …

While I'm picking bones, can we talk about this part? Ukraine's history begins before USSR and one GREAT way to show that is by not quoting Putin about how Ukrainians are actually Russians.

And imagine, IMAGINE, answering this question without mentioning USSR repressions.

> The historical links date as far back as the 9th century, when a group of people called the Rus moved their capital to Kyiv — a legacy President Vladimir Putin has often invoked when arguing that Ukraine is bound to Russia.

It's interesting though not surprising to see who's engaging with this piece. I've gotten a lot of notes from other young mothers and women who are tired of the way the internet and society overlooks our needs, and expects us, as I write, "to grin and bear it."

I've gotten two notes from young fathers. Otherwise, veeeeery few male-presenting accounts have even clicked like on the piece, or congratulated me. This is part of the problem—our collective treatment of pregnancy as a mystical, feminine experience, and not a fact of life.

This is a little harsh, especially given your admission that you didn't consider any of this before you became pregnant yourself. From my experience (though 19 years ago), finding pregnancy-related info geared towards dads-to-be was near impossible and loaded with misinfo

Just because your experience 19 years ago was bad doesn't mean that we can't do better and ask men to be more active in their support today. We need men to be better allies, because when we speak about it alone, pregnant or not, few seem to listen.

It doesn't say I hadn't considered it! It says I was shocked- the problem is worse than I thought. That doesn't address the fact that the majority of those even deigning to interact with the piece are women. My point is: these are societal problems, not "women's issues."

Please point me to a place where "admit I didn't consider any of this?" I've spent a lot of my time researching gender disparities on the internet, I've considered it plenty. Doesn't mean it is any less shocking. And that's immaterial (continued)

Nina Jankowicz @w cz pedia · 15m

Just because your experience 19 years ago was bad doesn't mean that we can't do better and ask men to be more active in their support today. We need men to be better allies, because when we speak about it alone, pregnant or not, few seem to listen.

Richard Merren @richardmerren · 7m

But it's harsh to chide "dudes" for failing to engage here and urge them to be better allies when you seem to be saying that you were not even a good ally on this a year ago and that facing it personally is the only thing that opened your eyes to it.

Nina Jankowicz @w cz pedia Follow

Again, I literally say that nowhere. As a woman, I have always been a good ally to other women online and have dedicated part of my career to that. And sorry, not sorry for being "harsh." Maybe I should smile more? Would you call a dude "harsh" for a very well founded criticism?

This is such a good overview of the absolute mess of information we experienced when my wife got pregnant with our first in late 2019. From misinformation, to overstating study results, to downright scams, it was nearly impossible to get a straight answer to so many questions

Jacob Kreider @JacobKreider 8m
And after the baby was born, the pediatrician gave us a list of like two reputable websites that he said should be our first stop for questions, but there wasn't really anything like that for during pregnancy

And a big part of my job is needing to disseminate and evaluate data

Jacob Kreider @JacobKreider 6m
Which I would have thought would have been an asset,but not in the dark forest of pregnancy,birth,and childcare information we've surrounded ourselves with

And you can't even really ask your parents for guidance,because all the things they know were from standards 3 decades ago!

I did miss this, thanks for reposting

My wife used apps during at least 1 of her pregnancies, but that was a few yrs ago. I don't know if the apps were as predatory then as now (probs some things never change). We used an app to track feedings/meds when they were babies tho

AZCatastrophe is vaxxed and hoping you are too @AZCatastro 49m

The ads in that app weren't terrible, but I'm glad to hear your ob-gyn has their own app you can use for pregnancy. Can it track everything when they're born as well? With two working parents we found it incredibly useful to be able to easily share all the feeding/meds stuff

So, my dudes: just because the headline says "moms-to-be" and the art includes a pregnant belly doesn't mean you can't read, engage, support, and think critically about the ways that the internet underserved half of the population (and by extension, children)

4 · 5 · 49

Nina Jankowicz @wiczipedia · 7h

Also, I've gotten comments about my use of "pregnant people" throughout the piece, as well as my call out of an internet built for and by "cisgender white men."

First, it was important to me to make sure this piece was inclusive. There are many non-binary people who give birth.

Thanks Danna! Yeah, IMO the idea is to quash criticism at home, thereby contributing to the popularity boost Putin gets for his foreign adventurism. This time around it may not be an easy sell; the economic/human consequences of invasion won't be something the public supports.

Here's some context about last night's alert from the UK about the Russian plot to overthrow the Ukrainian government. It's part of a coordinated Western campaign to shed light on Kremlin tactics — one that we didn't see in 2014. From me and @rwdburley washingtonpost.com/outlook/2022/0

"Look organic?" C'mon. They are just systems of relationship. Why try to fancy it up by adding eco to the word system? It's a lazy word choice

Try this: Map and compare the attributes of real ecosystems and the so called "information ecosystem."

There are so many meaningless terms used without a second thought in my field. "Hybrid warfare" is a great example. I assure you, I choose my words carefully. That's what writers tend to do :) Your disagreement—particularly so scornfully delivered—won't change my choice.

On the one hand, this is very grim. On the other, it is standard procedure in situations like these to make sure dependents (incl. pets!) are safe in case of an escalation. A reminder of the mostly unacknowledged personal sacrifices our diplomats make.

Hopeless plan, mostly because none of past Soviet satellite states want anything to do with Russia, and Russia isn't strong enough to take on Europe

This isn't new. Lethal aid is a distinct term from military aid—which can come in the form of training, for instance—and other types of aid (humanitarian, economic, democracy support).

This isn't some sort of massive conspiracy... just a somewhat jargony term in the aid biz.

"A Bloody Fucking Legend" @sextoysportcs · 11m

It's certainly fair to point out that it's been in use for awhile, but that doesn't change the fact that it's a propagandist euphemism that shouldn't be used in news reporting (much like many other terms that are commonly used).

It isn't a propagandist euphemism. It's a direct description of what is being provided. Often the articles in question will go on to describe the precise equipment that has been doled out. It's not propaganda if it's precisely what Ukraine has been asking for for over 8 years

If you want to get mad about unnecessary war, blame Russia, whose aggressive actions started this conflict, perpetuate it in a way that has created massive humanitarian consequences, and continue it based on a bunch of fabricated "threats" that don't exist.

This isn't Pentagon double-speak. Military experts have often categorized different types of military aid as either "non-lethal" (radios, radar, etc) or "lethal" (Javelin missiles).

(The "lethal/non-lethal" aid bit even featured in the Mueller Report)

I guess some bigger twitter accounts just caught onto this yesterday but I don't see it being used to obscure anything in any of this reporting in any of these articles? idk, there are a lot more heinous defense-industrial euphemisms that deserve scrutiny than this.

> Last December, the White House authorized a $200 million security assistance package that provides Ukraine with small arms and ammunition, secure radios, medical equipment and spare parts. Other lethal equipment including Javelin antitank missiles and other anti-armor artillery, as well as heavy machine guns, also were included. The U.S. Embassy in Kyiv said late Friday that a first shipment of nearly 200,000 pounds of lethal aid had recently arrived in Ukraine.

It's not even a euphemism! It's literally saying "aid that will be used for killing." WHAT IS A BETTER WAY TO SAY THAT? As I've said in another reply, any article worth its salt will then go on to detail what precise weapons, etc, are being provided. sheesh.

So many replies accusing me of wanting to "send US soldiers to die in a foreign war."

For the record: I don't think that's plausible or likely, and I don't support it.

Ye olde Kyiv pronounciation video has been resurrected in @jeromesoco's piece on the matter for @NPR.

npr.org/2022/01/25/107 …
twitter.com/wiczipedia/sta …

"How we describe Ukraine and Ukrainians and their cities is paramount to how the world perceives Ukraine," says Jankowicz, who wrote an op-ed in the Washington Post in 2019 about the pronunciation debate and made a video too

"And part of that perception," she says, "is about you describing Ukraine as its own distinct entity, not as a part of this alleged sphere of influence that Vladimir Putin wants to resurrect, in which all Slavic countries are part of a giant brotherhood and he is the king of them."

Two years ago I was laid off as the Moscow corro for the Los Angeles Times because the then-acting foreign editor (who had been in that position for 2 weeks) decided the paper couldn't afford to cover #Russia, #Ukraine. I thought it was a dumb move then. I know it was dumb now.

Do the Russian speakers really support Russia in the east? Or do the Russian speakers see themselves as Ukrainian? (I'm sure it is more complicated than that, which is why I'm asking.) Everybody seems to equate language with political support, which I don't know if true.

If there is an escalation in hostilities, a key issue of the renewed international focus on Ukraine should be protection of civilians. Also, a reminder that Ukraine has been at war with Russia for 8 years: since Russia occupied Crimea and has been backing armed groups in Donbas.

What matters is that across the board, WOMEN -- especially those with intersectional identities -- are abused online, and it's treated as the cost of having a public profile.

Playing politics around an issue that affects everyone will not solve it for anyone

You just said your research found that women receive the same amount of abuse across the board, yet in the next tweet claim the opposite. Which is it? All women or some? And why minimise one woman's experience or a whole group's? Misogyny doesn't pick & choose

No, I wrote that women across the political spectrum receive abuse. Women with intersectional identities receive more & compounded abuse. Both of the studies linked show that women of ethnic, racial, sexual, and other minorities receive more abuse than their white counterparts.

So much of broadcast media treats what's happening as a horse race, or worse yet, a new Cold War. @NPRKelly puts Ukrainians at the center of the story: "we are tired" and "you appreciate freedom when you don't have it"

It's a message I hope world leaders hear and never forget.

Yet another provocation by Belarus. We categorically reject accusations that Ukraine used a UAV on its border with Belarus. We call on Minsk to refrain from playing along with Russia's destabilising activities. Calm on Ukraine-Belarus border is in the interest of the whole region

The intensity with which Russian-state controlled media is spreading a false story about a fake UA drone allegedly 'violating Belarusian airspace' is a crystal clear example drawn straight from the pages of Russia's disinformation playbook. Do not be misled.

In the short term, that's not necessarily the case: it'd be hard for the Kremlin to use this particular ploy now that the USG said it would, whether or not the USG releases detailed evidence.

My tip, avoid chiropractors, they are quacks. See a physiotherapist.

Also basic back rehabilitation exercises, search 'NHS back rehabilitation exercises apropros to some stuff I've seen on the tl, just want to note that making online and/or professional spaces more hospitable to women is a lot more complicated than just "visibility"

Salome Gongadze @salome_gongadze · 26m

it's not an easy fix and, without getting too gender-essentialist, requires thinking about how male-dominated spaces can be inhospitable in very subtle and cultural ways ¯_(ツ)_/¯

Putin knows one tragic fact about NATO that many on my twitter feed dont. NATO wont accept new members who have Russian soldiers occupying parts of their countries, because NATO members dont want a war with Russia. That's why Russia invaded Georgia in 2008 & Ukraine 2014.

In 2017, while living in 🇺🇦, I was able to travel to the village where my grandfather was born, where no one in my family had set foot since 1940. I stood on the bank of the pond that powered my family's mill and walked in the yard of the church my great grandfather helped build.

Though I visited them on a peaceful, hazy June Sunday, those were places that had seen a lot of ugliness at one time. The priest had been murdered in the church locked inside as it was machine gunned. All the Polish families were sent away, never to return. (7/)

Such needless violence. Families torn apart. Atrocities committed. Cultured suppressed. All to create and preserve spheres of influence, denying millions freedom.

My family had a relatively happy ending. They were lucky. As we've seen recently, not all refugees are. (8/)

Ah yes, a woman in her 30s who has two degrees, speaks four languages, has written two books, appeared before the US Congress & UK/EU parliaments, and advised governments and beyond is a "12 year old Valley Girl." If I were over 40 I'm sure I'd be a "dumb old hag."

New #EyesOnRussia report out today from @Cen4infoRes: info-res.org/post/eyes-on-r ...

Key points:

1️⃣ Despite the Russian MOD & RT's assurances, we've not yet seen evidence that Russian troops stationed near Ukraine's border are moving away from it. (1/)

A straight up Molotov-Ribbentrop discussion happened on Rossiya-1 tonight, apparently.

(For non-Russian speakers, Russian state media discuss how Ukraine might be divided between Russia and Poland, with Poland taking Lutsk, Lviv, Ternopil, Russia taking Kharkiv, Kherson, Odesa).

Western statements have made Ukrainians extremely anxious, so why is the West doing it? According to @wiczipedia it's to "get ahead of Russian moves" a strategy of "deterrence through declassification" and Ukrainians are not the intended audience.

Problem is the kind of shaping operations the Russians are capable of fall well outside America's ability to predict and "declassify." You don't need to invade a country to destabilise it.

Exactly. Plus the assurances from MoD and RT that troops were returning to their bases is misleading at best; some have left Crimea but tens of thousands remain along Belarusian/Russian borders with Ukraine.

A few tips as the conflict goes on:

1. Until you see geolocations/verifications from reputable OSINT groups or media, best to treat reports with a grain of salt.
2. Esp with photos shared by RU/RU-backed forces, do a reverse image search to see if they're misattributed.

...maybe its Maybelline

As I watched you reporting today I noticed you have dark circles around your eyes.

This may be your make-up, or just your natural skin coloring.

How dumb the spread of disinformation can be; some Twitter rando photoshops a picture from yesterday's nursery shelling, quickly admits it was a photoshop, and now people are sharing it like it's legit. Half expect it to appear in a Russian MoD press conference by this evening.

Concurrently:

-Kindergarten shelled by Russian-backed forces
-Increased shelling along the contact line in Donbas
-Reports of car bomb in Donetsk
-Reports of internet jamming in Donetsk
-Open source evidence of more heavy artillery and tanks moving closer to the border

Is shelling of Donetsk considered "expected" from day to day, or is this an extraordinary occurrence?

This is what's happening in eastern Ukraine: Russia-led forces are shelling towns up & down the frontline. I met Valentina Gordeyeva today in a Kurakhove hospital. Thursday she was hit by shrapnel in the hand & abdomen waiting for the bus in Mariinka. "My blood was everywhere."
